Government considering limiting public FoI requests

THE government is considering an overhaul of the Freedom of Information Act after it revealed that over £1 million is spent each year administering the law.

Deputy Chief Minister Tom Binet told the JEP that he would like to see a limit placed on the number of FoI requests made by Islanders per year to prevent resources being spent on vexatious submissions by what he described as “a small number of people”

New proposals to counter ransomware: Have your say

Ransomware is the most acute cyber threat for most businesses in the UK, and the impact of an attack can affect every aspect of an organisation. This includes disrupting operational delivery, hitting finances, compromising customer data, eroding trust and damaging an organisation’s reputation.

Navigating GDPR Risks in AI: Insights from the EDPB’s latest Opinion & the UK ICO’s AI Consultation Response

The EDPB’s Opinion 28/2024 had been much anticipated and generated significant media coverage, with headlines such as ‘AI developers don’t need permission to scoop up data, EU data watchdogs say’ (Politico). The UK ICO’s response to its year-long consultation on privacy issues in generative AI may have attracted less attention, but it also marked a significant development in how businesses should assess AI from a privacy perspective.
